People say the Internet is about disintermediation, but in fact an astonishing amount of our online activity is conducted via the five stacks: Amazon, Apple, Facebook, Google, and Microsoft.
Today, more than half the nation’s primary — and secondary-school students — more than 30 million children — use Google education apps like Gmail and Docs. Today [Chromebooks] account for more than half the mobile devices shipped to schools. (Singer, 2017)
Google has promised not to build profiles on students or serve them ads only within Google Apps for Education services. When a student goes to a different Google service, however, and they’re still logged in under their educational account, Google associates their activity on that service with their educational account, and then serves them ads on at least some of those non-GAFE services based on that activity.
The companies said they had not asked users for specific permission to read their Gmail messages, because the practice was covered by their user agreements.

Important changes to your account

Your tamiel@g.unicamp.br account now works more like a full Google Account. Your account is compatible with nearly all Google products, but your g.unicamp.br administrator may decide which products are enabled for your account. For tips about using your account after this transition, visit our Help Center.

When you use Google services, your domain administrator will have access to your tamiel@g.unicamp.br account information, including any data you store with this account in Google services. You can learn more here, or by consulting your organization’s privacy policy, if one exists. You can choose to maintain a separate account for your personal use of any Google services, including email. If you have multiple Google accounts, you can manage which account you use with Google services and switch between them whenever you choose. Your username and profile picture can help you ensure that you’re using the intended account.

If your organization provides you access to the Google Apps core suite of messaging and collaboration applications, your use of those services is governed by your organization’s Google Apps agreement. Any other Google services your administrator enables (“Additional Services”) are available to you under the Google Terms of Service and the Google Privacy Policy. Certain Additional Services may also have service-specific terms. Your use of any services your administrator allows you to access constitutes acceptance of applicable service-specific terms.

Being ‘open’ does not automatically translate to neutrality, progressiveness or a place free of political tensions.

"What human beings are and will become is decided in the shape of our tools no less than in the action of statesmen and political movements. The design of technology is thus an ontological decision fraught with political consequences. The exclusion of the vast majority from participation in this decision is profoundly undemocratic"  (Feenberg)
Public institutions are intermediaries. They cannot outsource tech to a single business or chance.

Students, faculty and staff cannot be indoctrinated into software systems.
